Damn Right I've Got The Blues – Blues Point vs. Quique Gomez & Luca Giordano vs. Sheba

BLUES POINT

Simply Blues

independent release

I've never been to Poland, but I did spend 20 years living in Leith, which has more Poles per square foot than anywhere else on Earth. Most of their time seemed to spent drinking, fighting and crying, so it's no wonder they fitted in seamlessly. And they certainly seemed to have the blues.

And here comes Polish solo / duo / trio Blues Point to prove once and for all that they do, indeed, have the blues. The main man is Wlodek Sobczak, the singer, acoustic and electric guitarist, keyboards, bass and drummer. He's helped out by Mirek Borkowski who plays guitar and sings on five tunes, and also by saxophonist Arek Osenkowski.

It's all original material, with only one cover – 'Lonely In This Town' by Swiss blues performer Philipp Fankhauser – and sees them mixing up acoustic blues, blues rock and even verging on rock'n'roll. It's competent without ever exploding into life, and makes for a pleasant listen. The one exception is 'My Guardian Angel', which sees them find a song that matches the performance. More of a download some tracks experience, rather than a full on album.
